Senior Capstone Project Final Research Report

Gaining Domestic Violence Victims’ Trust in Monterey County Law Enforcement

Keywords: Domestic violence, law enforcement, police, trust, YWCA, workshop, training,
Monterey County

Abstract:
Domestic violence victims can feel re-victimized when Monterey County law enforcement are involved. To assist with this problem, a domestic violence training for local law enforcement was collaboratively formed to their expressed needs. A workshop was also formed for women at the shelter to gain their trust in law enforcement.

I. Executive Summary

YWCA Monterey County provides safe refuge, counseling, and support for survivors of domestic violence as well as their children. My senior field placement is at YWCA Monterey County’s shelter, called Lawson Safehouse. This shelter is for women and children fleeing from domestic violence and is the only confidential shelter in all of Monterey County. At YWCA, I have seen that domestic violence victims can feel re-victimized when Monterey County law enforcement are involved. When law enforcement is involved with domestic violence, it is crucial that the victims get the most effective assistance.

This capstone project focused on Monterey County law enforcement and women staying in the shelter. I have formed a domestic violence training for law enforcement, shaped to their expressed needs. I received 60% of the surveys back and was able to make a training regarding: resources, handouts, restraining orders, domestic violence in homosexual relationships, effects on children, and victim’s rights.

I interviewed women that stayed in the shelter that had Monterey County law enforcement involvement with domestic violence. Their opinion on law enforcement’s helpfulness ranged from a -4 to a 5 (which is the highest). Their average score was a 1.67. After hearing their stories and forming the law enforcement’s training, I developed a workshop for the women to try to gain the women’s trust in local law enforcement. Two of the five women that received my presented workshop had an increase in trust. The median score of trust went from 2.4 to 3.0. I helped two women gain more trust in law enforcement, which means I achieved my goal.

I had continuous appreciation and support by Monterey County law enforcement and other community organizations.
II. Agency Introduction

YWCA has been providing assistance to women as early as 1858. YWCA Monterey County has existed since 1972. The mission of YWCA Monterey County is to “create and provide long standing solutions to preventing and eliminating domestic violence, racism, and prejudice.” Domestic violence is YWCA’s major focus. YWCA encourages the wellbeing and empowerment of women. Currently YWCA Monterey County has two counseling centers which are located in Salinas and Monterey.

My senior field placement is at YWCA Monterey County’s shelter, called Lawson Safehouse. This shelter is for women and children fleeing from domestic violence and is the only confidential shelter in all of Monterey County. YWCA takes in vulnerable women and children, and enables them to become self-sufficient. YWCA provides safe refuge, counseling, and support for survivors of domestic violence as well as their children. YWCA has a 24/7 crisis line to offer support to anyone who needs to talk, get help, or seek information. YWCA also provides educational outreach through delivering presentations on domestic violence and teen dating violence. Presentations help bring awareness of the issue as well as prevention. YWCA also has two school based programs to assist with children from Kindergarten through twelfth grade. YWCA provides individual, couple, family, and children counseling. YWCA also has a legal advocate who helps clients file a restraining order and accompanies the client to court.

Safehouse, the YWCA shelter, assists women and children fleeing from domestic violence. These survivors are provided a room, food, clothing, necessities, school supplies, and other needed supplies for free. These women and children staying at YWCA’s Safehouse Shelter can stay up to eight weeks. Counselors come to the shelter to counsel the women and children. The women receive group and individual counseling at the shelter. Through the whole Safehouse experience, the women leave with better self-esteem, wellbeing, hope, and future. At my internship, the population being served is women and children, as well as anyone that calls the crisis line. Domestic violence occurs to anyone. All demographics, ages, and economic status are assisted at YWCA. However, not as many victims are being supported and attended to as YWCA would like.

III. Challenges

A barrier YWCA Monterey County has is regarding Women’s Crisis Center. Women’s Crisis Center was located in Salinas and delivered a lot of the same services as YWCA Monterey County and Monterey County Rape Crisis Center. Women’s Crisis Center closed over a year and a half ago due to lack of funding. When this occurred, the Salinas population was left stranded without any help regarding domestic violence and sexual assault. YWCA Monterey County and Monterey County Rape Crisis Center have tried to make sure Salinas is being assisted as much as possible. This was done by taking over Women’s Crisis Center’s crisis line and opening up offices in Salinas. Though Women’s Crisis Center closed down over a year and a half ago, calls are still received asking for the Women’s Crisis Center’s number, and even confusing YWCA Monterey County with Women’s Crisis Center. Through the assumptions and wrong information being spread by word of mouth, some people do not fully know what YWCA has to offer. This is very worrisome to know there are women and children not receiving the help they need. One task for this barrier is to make sure people are being referred to the correct agencies and not being told to locate Women’s Crisis Center, which causes more grief and confusion.

Domestic violence affects everyone. The National Coalition Against Domestic Violence (2005) states that “all religious, ethnic, socio-economic and educational backgrounds, and of varying ages, physical abilities and lifestyles can be affected by domestic violence.” Domestic vioence is a problem in all countries, states, and counties. Domestic violence is continually underreported. Victims can be ashamed, living in fear, in denial of the situation, financially dependent on the partner, and so on. When law enforcement receive a domestic violence call, it is crucial that best practice and procedure is applied. A 2005 study by the United States Department of Justice reports that “two in five incidences go unreported to authorities” (Center Against Family Violence, n.d.). This statistic shows that about 40% of domestic violence incidences are not reported. According to RAND California statistics, in 2006, Monterey County Law Enforcement received 2,234 calls. If the Department of Justice statistic and RAND statistics are correct, there were over 3,720 domestic violence incidences in 2006 in Monterey County.
Since domestic violence incidences are not always reported, law enforcement need to offer the best assistance to the affected family because it is hard to know when one will call authorities again.

Women in the shelter and on the crisis line have expressed negative experiences with law enforcement. There can be reasons why law enforcement has not assisted to the best of their ability such as: not educated on domestic violence, come from a violent home, do not know correct resources and information, do not show sensitivity, or are not correctly trained. Many women did not think that the law enforcement listened to what they were expressing as victims.
Journal of Interpersonal Violence (2000) understands that “For victims, listening and talking constitutes a necessary first step to helping them; when the police are unwilling or unable to do this, it is easy for victims to attribute hostile attitudes toward police” (p. 544). This quote expresses what many women in the shelter and other clients of YWCA have expressed. Some have gone to the point where they feel re-victimized. Another stance that the report in the Journal of Interpersonal Violence expressed is that “Victims want the police to show empathy for them and their situation” (p. 546). If a woman does not feel like an officer is listening, understanding where she is coming from, or making her feel safe, she is already going to put her guard up regarding police assistance. Domestic violence victims can feel re-victimized when Monterey County law enforcement are involved.

YWCA Monterey County does not have much contact or collaboration with Monterey County law enforcement. The International Association of Chiefs of Police has a policy which was in effect July 2003 regarding police response to violence against women. The policy speaks about prevention and training regarding domestic violence. This policy believes in prevention through collaboration. The policy states that “through ongoing partnerships with local advocacy organizations the department shall develop domestic violence curricula and train officers in order to enhance the officers’/agency’s response to victims” (International Association of Chiefs of Police, 2003). It also speaks about sharing the developed curricula with domestic violence advocacy organizations. This source shows that collaboration is essential to assisting victims in the community. Currently there is no collaboration or communication between YWCA Monterey County and Monterey County Law Enforcement. YWCA employees do not know the last time domestic violence presentations were delivered to any Monterey County law enforcement. Collaboration between law enforcement and community organizations is essential to best assist domestic violence victims.

IV. Description of Capstone Project:

My capstone project has two population focuses: law enforcement and domestic violence victims in YWCA Safehouse Shelter. The capstone project is forming a domestic violence training for Monterey County law enforcement. With the women in the shelter, a workshop will be delivered to increase the women’s trust in law enforcement.

Methods

There have been many methods established to accomplish my capstone goal. My goal is that victims of domestic violence will have more trust in Monterey County law enforcement. I formed a survey in collaboration with a Monterey County Lieutenant. The questions asked are: when the agencies last domestic violence training was and by whom, what topics were covered, what they would like in their domestic violence training (which is done by checking boxes), when and how long they would like the training, how often, and any further comments. The survey is attached in Appendix A. The survey was sent via email to fifteen training managers. I received nine surveys back. This means I have 60% of the county’s opinion, which is more than half.

The following chart shows when the nine law enforcement agencies last received domestic violence training. Fortunately, three agencies had domestic violence training within a year ago. One agency had not had training between one to two years ago. Two agencies had no domestic violence training within the last two to three years. One agency had not had domestic violence training for over six years. This is shocking because there have probably been new officers hired within the last six years at the certain agency without any domestic violence training.
Once results were sent back I analyzed and took the top six answers to compile in a domestic violence training. Below are the results from the nine surveys. Out of twelve needs the six topics that are covered in the domestic violence training are: resources, handouts, restraining orders, homosexual relationships, effects on children, victim’s rights. The sixth answer was tied at five votes for stalking, repeat incidences, and effects on children. I could not have the training on all of those additional topics. Therefore, I chose the most important dynamic in domestic violence. I chose effects on children because there are many detrimental effects on children who are being grown up in a violent home. Law enforcement needs to know how the abuse affects children physiologically, emotionally, and physically. The domestic violence training is attached in Appendix B.
The following chart shows how long law enforcement agencies could allot YWCA Monterey County to train officers on domestic violence. This shows that three training managers want the training under half an hour. Two training managers would like it no more than one hour. Two training managers would actually like it to be between two to fours hours. Two to four hours are an amazing amount of time to train law enforcement. Unfortunately two training managers did not write how long they would like the training to be. I am forming the training to be about fifteen to thirty minutes because that is the usual allotted time for trainings. However, the information can easily be elaborated on if needed to be an hour, two hours, or even four hours. If a law enforcement agency wants a two to four hour training, YWCA will present on all twelve issues presented in the survey as well as form real life scenarios to act out.
The following chart shows how often the training managers would like the training to occur. Five agencies want the training every year and four agencies want the training bi-annually. This shows YWCA Monterey County how often to expect delivering trainings to Monterey County law enforcement.

All the training managers wanted resources. I called all different domestic violence related agencies to tell them that I was making an English and Spanish resource page. They all supported it. I contacted the District Attorney’s (DA) Victim Witness Program. I was informed that they already have a universal resource pamphlet specifically made for law enforcement. I stated my findings from the surveys and the DA’s office were very frustrated that no matter how many times the officers and chiefs were reminded of the pamphlet it still was not working to its fullest. Because it is not best to recreate the wheel, I decided to not form another resource pamphlet. What the DA’s office and I have decided is to inform law enforcement in my formed training about the pamphlet and where they can obtain the most updated copies. The resource pamphlet and domestic violence handouts are in Appendix C. At every training large stacks of the domestic violence pamphlet will be brought for law enforcement to take. This is the only next step as of right now in regards to giving law enforcement resources. Understanding why the pamphlet is not currently working would be very interesting to find out but that is a whole other project in itself as well as what the officers feel would be the best option for obtaining updated information on resources. Now that the training is completed, all training managers have been notified. They know who to contact for the training and have been sincerely thanked for their assistance in forming the needed domestic violence training.

Women staying in the Safehouse shelter who had Monterey County police involvement were interviewed. The interview consisted of if they called the police, how many times police have been involved, which police department, how they were treated, if they were provided any materials, rate of helpfulness, and further comments. These interview questions are in Appendix D. These interviews were very insightful but also saddening. From January through the end of April, nineteen women have stayed at the shelter. There are five rooms and women can stay up to eight weeks at the shelter so it takes a little while until additional women enter. Out of the nineteen women, ten women have had police involvement. Two women had police involvement in another state, and eight women had Monterey County law enforcement involved. I have had the chance to interview five women that had Monterey County law enforcement involvement.

The following chart shows if the women received any materials regarding domestic violence or about community agencies that can help. Two women were provided materials, yet three women were not. This is interesting to see because every law enforcement agency wanted information on resources, and have additional handouts. This coincides because law enforcement states that they need Spanish and English resources and handouts for the victims, and more than half the women were not given any materials.

The following chart shows what each woman rated the involved police department. There are six rates being shown on the chart because one woman had two police involvements with different departments. A woman rated her involved police department a -4. This was very shocking to hear. She stated that she will never call the police ever, ever again no matter the situation. This is sad to hear because she has a daughter and was pregnant with a second child. She felt re-victimized, that the police were biased towards her partner because they knew him, and that the situation was completely awful. Another woman rated the law enforcement with a zero. She rated a zero because she did not get the needed help, was not seen as the victim, and needs the law enforcement to know how to treat victims. She, just like the other woman, will not call the police again. This woman has three children. Fortunately, a woman scored a police department with a five. She felt very safe with the police. They reassured her to not feel guilty of the abuse and to not be afraid. I was very grateful for her opinion. However, it is hard to hear that two women, with children, will never call the police ever again no matter the situation. The average score from these five women regarding the helpfulness of law enforcement is a 1.67.

!Score on Law Enforcement's Helpfulness

After these interviews their stories made me become an even stronger advocate for them. I have made a workshop for the women to learn more about the law enforcement and gain trust in their law enforcement. The workshop is in Appendix E. The workshop tells the women what the law enforcement’s training contains from the training managers survey. This shows the women that YWCA Monterey County has heard the victim’s complaints and comments and are trying to ensure no more re-victimization occurs. The women will learn what law enforcement are trained on and understand how they are supposed to be treated. Women are also told about what they can do if they have a bad experience with law enforcement. Women will hear the positive comments that were provided by law enforcement. A police officer is also going to attend the workshop so that they can speak on behalf of Monterey County law enforcement. Prior to the workshop I am going to ask all the women if they feel comfortable with an officer attending. If they do feel comfortable, meeting an officer could help the women see a police officer for who they are, and not thinking about their own safety at the domestic violence incident. Women will be reminded in the workshop that domestic violence incidences are the most dangerous for law enforcement to assist. This will be further shown by the police officer’s stance. This workshop will be during their nightly support groups. Women have nightly support groups Sunday through Thursday night. This workshop will be provided during every woman’s stay in the shelter.

V. Conclusion

All trainings will be evaluated on its effectiveness. The officers will answer a short questionnaire before the training and will answer the questionnaire again afterwards. The questionnaire will look at how many resources officers know, what the major types of restraining orders are, different effects on children, and what to provide to victims. The pre/post survey is in Appendix H.

The workshop for women was evaluated on its effectiveness. The five women answered the same survey before and after the workshop. The survey contains questions regarding what law enforcement is trained on, the level of trust in law enforcement, and what victim’s should be given. If a Monterey County officer is part of the workshop, the questionnaire will be taken without the officer’s presence in the room. A major difference that is being looked at is the score regarding the women’s trust. I hope to see a rise from before and after the workshop. This pre/post survey is in Appendix I.
When analyzing the pre and post surveys, I saw a slight change in answers. The women were asked what law enforcement should be giving victims of domestic violence. The women’s answers were victim’s compensation, call family members, restraining order services, and resources. After the workshop, four women stated resources should be given, one more also said the officer’s name and badge number, as well as an evaluation form on the officer. This shows that the women understand they should be receiving information about resources as well as about the involved officer.

The women were asked to score their level of trust in Monterey County law enforcement on a 0-10 scale. The following charts show the pre and post survey answers.

The median score for the pre-survey is 2.4. The median score for the post-survey is 3.0. Two women scored their level of trust higher after the workshop. The other three women’s score stayed the same. This workshop will be given to every woman that stays at the shelter. Since I helped 40% of these women’s level of trust in law enforcement, I am very content with the results. Unfortunately, two of the women were not originally from California so they had no Monterey County law enforcement experience. Another woman from Monterey County has a criminal record and has absolutely no trust in law enforcement, and does not want to change her opinion. Her score was a zero on the pre and post survey. Fortunately, the two other women did show a change in their level of trust in law enforcement. This makes my workshop very successful.

This project has been a great experience for me from the very beginning. I am happy to show my results and hard work. It is a great feeling to give other domestic violence agencies a copy of the developed training for their records of what law enforcement want in their training. The letter to other domestic violence agencies is in Appendix G.

I have had a great deal of support from different law enforcement officers and organizations. I have had the chance to share my capstone to the Crime Prevention Officers Association Monterey County meeting twice, and also at the Monterey County Domestic Violence Coordinating Council. This has been very empowering. I saw from all there comments and questions that my goal was needed and many people are appreciative of my effort. Even the law enforcement training managers that took my survey were appreciative. One Sergeant said, “Thank you very much for taking this on, it will be extremely beneficial is this training can get done.” Others wrote that it is “definitely a needed class” and they want “ongoing training.”

There are some recommendations I would make. I did not have an opportunity to make a laminated check-off list for officers. I was going to develop a check-off list of what officers need to make sure they do for the victim such as give resources, handouts if needed, name and badge number, and so on. This was going to be worked on collaboratively with the District Attorney’s office. They did not get back to me in time to finish the card before the end of my placement. I wanted to wait until they spoke about what it most needed on the card because this card can be passed out for a very long time in Monterey County and I want to ensure that it is 100% correct and helpful. Forming this check-off list would be the next step in fully finishing this project.

VI. University Vision Statement and Major Learning Outcomes:

My capstone will fulfill the University’s Vision Statement of what their students will accomplish as well as the Department of Health and Human Services and Public Policy. The University’s vision aims for students to “be a collaborative, intellectual community distinguished by partnerships with existing institutions.” YWCA Monterey County and my capstone will assist with being connected through the community. YWCA Monterey County will be more connected with the law enforcement throughout the whole county. Through the analysis of the questionnaires there will probably be many partnerships made between law enforcement and YWCA Monterey County. With this, my capstone will fulfill the Department’s Collaboration Major Learning Outcome. My capstone will also fulfill Information Management, Personal and Professional Communication, Professional Development, and Statistics and Research Methods. Information Management deals with applying the computer to bettering health and human services practices. The computer will be used during the duration of my capstone. Personal and Professional Communication as well as Professional Development will be fulfilled during my capstone project. I will be communicating with many professional law enforcement chiefs, captains, and officers. This will assist me with carrying myself more professionally and expressing myself more professionally. Statistics and Research Methods will be fulfilled from my own statistical analysis techniques to better the community and health and human services.

Survey of Training Needs for Monterey County Law Enforcement
Training Manager(s),

As part of my capstone project at CSUMB, I am working with YWCA Monterey County to develop and provide domestic violence training to Monterey County law enforcement. YWCA Monterey County is the main domestic violence agency in the county. With the current harsh economic times, domestic violence incidences rise because of financial disputes.

Monterey County law enforcement need updated training about domestic violence because of the substantial increase. YWCA will provide free training to law enforcement. Please complete the attached survey to assist with the development of a formed training for Monterey County law enforcement.

Thank you for your time,

Brooke Ashley
Survey of Training Needs for Monterey County Law Enforcement

1. How much domestic violence training is law enforcement provided?

2. When is the last time domestic violence training was provided? Who delivered the training?

3. Updated domestic violence training is crucial in this county. What is needed in the domestic violence training? Check all that apply.
   - Resources
   - Handouts
   - Information regarding restraining orders
   - Information regarding stalking
   - Consequences victim’s face when leaving
   - Domestic violence in homosexual relationships
   - Repeat domestic violence incidences in a relationship
   - Cycle of violence
   - Effect of children
   - Power and control
   - Types of abuse
   - Victim’s rights
   - State and federal laws

4. What would be a reasonable amount of time to provide this training?

5. How often would you need this training provided (annual, bi-annual, etc.)?

6. Please provide any comments or ideas you think would be beneficial to the development of this training.

YWCA Monterey County
April 2009
Introduction

Domestic violence can happen to anyone of any race, age, sexual orientation, religion or gender. It can happen to couples who are married, cohabitating, or who are dating. Domestic violence affects people of all socioeconomic backgrounds and education levels. Domestic violence affects everyone.

Domestic violence is a law enforcement issue because violence against another person is a crime. Law enforcement assistance with domestic violence is crucial to helping the domestic violent relationship. Although there are other organizations that assist domestic violence victims, survivors, and abusers, law enforcement can help influence how the abuse is now viewed by the abuser, victim, and children.

Resources and Handouts

The Domestic Violence Coordinating Council of Monterey County (DVCC) has formed a pamphlet with information on domestic violence, restraining orders, safety planning, and resources. The pamphlet is in Spanish and English. This is the best information for domestic violence victims. The pamphlet is routinely updated and is online. The link is on the left called “Domestic Violence Brochures.” This brochure has the most up to date resource information. The website link is: http://www.co.monterey.ca.us/dvcc/

Main resources for law enforcement to know:
- YWCA Monterey County Crisis Line (831) 372-6300
- California Rural Legal Assistance (831) 757-5221
- Shelter Outreach Plus (831) 422-2201
- Defensa de Mujeres (831) 685-3737
- Monterey County District Attorney Victim/Witness Program (831) 755-5071

* Domestic violence advocate: Bring updated pamphlet and write down the website link for law enforcement. Bring copies of Spanish and English handouts of cycle of violence, and the power and control wheel.
Restraining Orders

California Rural Legal Assistance (CRLA), YWCA Monterey County, and Defensa de Mujeres provide legal assistance regarding restraining orders. Restraining orders help set limits of contact and sets a strong message to the abuser.

Emergency Protective Order:
If law enforcement arrests the alleged abuser, an Emergency Protective Order is mandated. An Emergency Protective Order is obtained by law enforcement when an officer believes that the victim or family member is in immediate danger of domestic violence. The Emergency Protective Order is intended as a temporary measure of safety until the victim can receive a more permanent restraining order, such as the Temporary Restraining Order. The Emergency Protective Order is current from the time of arrest until the court arraignment. The victim can extend the Protective Order by calling the District Attorney’s office.

Civil Restraining Order:
Civil Restraining Order is for protection from someone that is not a family member or in a domestic relationship. This can be against a classmate, neighbors, etc.

Temporary Restraining Order:
A Temporary Restraining Order consists of submitting paperwork to the court. The judge approves or denies the Temporary Restraining Order at court hearing.

Permanent Restraining Order:
Permanent Restraining Orders usually last from six months to three years. The order consists of no contact and no closer than 100 yards.
Domestic Violence in Homosexual Relationships

Domestic violence victims who are in a homosexual relationship may be fearful of homophobic and hostile law enforcement, medical providers, social service providers and domestic violence programs. This in turn makes victims fearful in leaving their abusive relationship and obtaining help.

Homosexual relationships can be abusive just like heterosexual relationships. Homosexuals should not be discriminated against. Homosexuals receive the same assistance from law enforcement, medical providers, and social service providers as do heterosexuals.

Effects on Children

Children may develop behavioral or emotional difficulties after witnessing parental/guardian abuse. Children's responses to the violence may vary from aggression to withdrawal to anxiety. In addition, children may develop symptoms of depression or Post Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD).

Children witnessing domestic violence and living in an environment where violence occurs may experience some of the same trauma as abused children. Not all children are affected by domestic violence in the same way. Children may become fearful, inhibited, aggressive, antisocial, withdrawn, anxious, depressed, angry, confused; suffer from disturbed sleep, problems with eating, difficulties at school and challenges in making friends. Children often feel caught in the middle between their parents and find it difficult to talk to either of them. Adolescents may act out or exhibit risk-taking behaviors such as drug and alcohol use, running away, sexual promiscuity and criminal behavior.

Children have emotional, behavior, physical, social, and cognitive effects.

Emotional effects:
- Guilt, responsible for the abuse
- Confusion between what love and hate it is
- Anger about violence
Behavior effects:
- Acting out or withdrawing
- Filling adult roles (care-taking)
- Bullying
- Bedwetting
- Nightmares

Physical effects:
- Nervous, anxious
- Neglect personal hygiene
- Often sick with colds and flu

Social effects:
- Isolated
- Do not trust others easily
- Poor conflict resolution skills
- Very social because always wanting to stay away from home

Cognitive effects:
- Blames others for their own behaviors
- Okay to hit others and control others
- Low self-esteem

Children are vulnerable to abuse in the home. Sometimes children are caught in the middle, are targeted, or witness the different types of abuse. Children are not only at high risk of being physically abused, but they are also at risk of being verbally and emotionally abused.
Victim’s Rights

Victims should be provided:

- The name and telephone number of responding police agency
- The name and badge number of the responding officer
- Domestic violence shelters, legal assistance, and other related resources

Victims should be reminded they have the right to:

- File a petition requesting a restraining order in regards to their needs (ex: not entering premises, assaulting and attacking, stalking behavior, no contact with children).

Appendix C:
Resources and Handouts
DOMESTIC VIOLENCE

The Domestic Violence Coordinating Council of Monterey County
Post Office Box 2851
Salinas California 93902
http://www.co.monterey.ca.us/

It is a crime for any person to beat or assault another person! Has a spouse or partner (current or former) done any of these things to you?

- Hit you
- Threatened to hurt you
- Locked you up or held you against your will
- Raped or forced you to have sex
- Damaged your property
- Broken into your home
- Stalking

IF YOU ARE IN DANGER CALL 911:
A police officer will respond to your call and conduct an investigation of the abuse.

- Tell the police about the incident in detail.
- Tell them if there are witnesses to the abuse.
- Show them injuries, bruises & damaged property.
- Show them court documents such as a “No Contact Order,” Restraining Order, or Emergency Protective Order.
- Ask the police to take pictures. If the police do not take pictures, it is very important to take pictures yourself; bruises may appear several days later. If you are in immediate danger, ask the police to issue an “Emergency Protective Order” to keep the abuser away.
- You have the right to have an advocate present during any subsequent interviews with law enforcement, District Attorney, or Defense Attorney pursuant to Penal Code Section 679.05.

DESPITE ARREST, THE ABUSER MAY BE RELEASED AT ANY TIME
Above all, make sure that you and your children will be safe. Seek medical attention. Consider staying with friends or relatives for a few days. You can also contact a local shelter for temporary housing at a secret location, or for help in finding somewhere else to live.

ASK FOR HELP!
- Ask the police to stand by at your home while you get your things. (See safety plan for list.)
- If you have no money, apply for public assistance right away. You may be eligible for public assistance, food stamps, and Medi-Cal.

RESTRAINING ORDERS
Under the “Resource” section you will find a list of agencies that can help you prepare and file restraining order documents to remove the abuser from your home, to keep the abuser away from you, or calling you, your family, work, children’s school, and child care provider.

IF THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY BECOMES INVOLVED:
If the accused bails out of jail, you may need to obtain a restraining order. Contact the agencies listed under the “Resource” section of this handout. If the accused is released on bail, the District Attorney will request a court order keeping the accused from contacting you in any manner. This order will remain effective only as long as the case is pending. If you wish to offer information about the custody status of the accused, or request a “No Contact Order,” you should contact the Victim/Witness Assistance Program in the District Attorney’s Office.

VICTIM/WITNESS PROGRAM
If you contact the Victim/Witness Assistance Program, they may be able to provide:

- Support and guidance through the court process.
- Help with your immediate needs after the crime.
- Referrals to local resources and services.
- Assistance with recovery of your “out of pocket” expenses, such as medical, mental health and wage loss.

BATTERED WOMAN’S SAFETY PLAN:
It is likely that you will be battered again in the near future. Having an escape plan can help you avoid such tragedy. If you find that you or your children are in danger from your partner, you must leave home and work out a plan which should include:

- Access to a hidden set of car keys.
- A hidden emergency fund, even if it is only one or two dollars stashed per week.
- A suitcase with a couple of changes of clothes for yourself and your children. Leave it with a trusted friend or hide it where your partner won’t look. Include the following items:

  IDENTIFICATION SUCH AS
  - Driver’s License
  - Birth Certificates (yours and children’s)
  - Green Card and/or work permit
  - Welfare Identification
  - Social Security Card & Passports

Workshop for Women in Shelter Regarding Law Enforcement
Workshop for Women in Shelter Regarding Law Enforcement

Domestic violence is a law enforcement issue because violence against another person is a crime. Law enforcement assistance with domestic violence is crucial to helping the domestic violent relationship. Law enforcement can influence how the abuse is viewed by the abuser, victim, and children.

YWCA Monterey County wanted to ensure that victims of domestic violence are being treated, helped, and referred correctly when there was police involvement. YWCA contacted each Monterey County law enforcement training manager to find out what they would like in their training. After all the questionnaires, YWCA found out what law enforcement would like/needed to be trained on. YWCA formed a training to their needs.

The aspects of domestic violence that law enforcement needed in their training are as follows:

1. Resources
2. Handouts for victims
3. Restraining Orders
4. Domestic Violence in homosexual relationships
5. Effects on children
6. Victim’s rights

These six topics were the most needed throughout all Monterey County law enforcement agencies. YWCA has formed a training to fit their needs. All Monterey County law enforcement is or will be trained on the six previously mentioned topics.
Victim’s Rights

Victims should be provided:

- The name and telephone number of responding police agency
- The name and badge number of the responding officer
- Domestic violence shelters and resources

Victims should be reminded they have the right to:

- File a petition requesting a restraining order in regards to their needs (ex: not entering premises, assaulting and attacking, stalking behavior, no contact with children).

If victim has had a bad experience with law enforcement:

There is a form for evaluating police response to domestic violence. This can be completed if you want to make a complaint and state what your involvement was like. The form can be found at http://www.ncdsv.org/images/police_eval.pdf. This form can make sure that women’s experiences are being known by Monterey County law enforcement and empower them to make a change.

Resources

Resources are to be handed out to victims on every domestic violence call. The resource should consist of legal assistance, shelter, counseling, and crisis lines. The Domestic Violence Coordinating Council of Monterey County has a pamphlet solely made for law enforcement. The link for the most updated pamphlet is: http://www.co.monterey.ca.us/dvcc/

Handouts

Handouts could be provided if law enforcement has them or believe they are needed. Some related handouts could be:

- Power and Control Wheel
- Cycle of Violence

Restraining Orders

Law enforcement are trained about the importance of restraining orders as well as what the different types are. Different restraining orders consist of: Emergency Protective Order, Civil Restraining Order, Temporary Restraining Order, and Permanent Restraining Order. Restraining orders help set limits of contact and sets a strong message to the abuser.

Emergency Protective Order:

If law enforcement arrests the alleged abuser, an Emergency Protective Order is mandated. An Emergency Protective Order can also be obtained by law enforcement when an officer believes that the victim or family member is in immediate danger of domestic violence. The Emergency Protective Order is a temporary measure of safety until the victim can receive a more permanent restraining order. The Emergency Protective Order is current from the time of arrest until the court arraignment. The Protective Order can be extended by the victim by calling the District Attorney’s office.

Civil Restraining Order:

Civil Restraining Order is for protection from someone that is not a family member or in a domestic relationship. This can be against a classmate, neighbors, etc.

Temporary Restraining Order:

A Temporary Restraining Order consists of submitting paperwork to the court. The Temporary Restraining Order is in effect until the formal court hearing. The judge approves or denies the Temporary Restraining Order at court hearing.

Permanent Restraining Order:

Permanent Restraining Orders usually last from six months to three years. The order consists of no contact and no closer than 100 yards.
Domestic Violence in Homosexual Relationships

Domestic violence victims who are in a homosexual relationship may be fearful of:

- homophobic and hostile law enforcement
- medical providers
- social service providers and domestic violence programs.

This in turn makes victims fearful in leaving their abusive relationship and obtaining help.

Homosexual relationships can be abusive just like heterosexual relationships.

Homosexuals should not be discriminated against. Homosexuals receive the same assistance from law enforcement, medical providers, and social service providers as do heterosexuals.

Effects on Children

Children witnessing domestic violence and living in an environment where violence occurs may experience some of the same trauma as abused children. Not all children are affected by domestic violence in the same way. Children may become fearful, inhibited, aggressive, antisocial, withdrawn, anxious, depressed, angry, confused; suffer from disturbed sleep, problems with eating, difficulties at school and challenges in making friends. Children often feel caught in the middle between their parents and find it difficult to talk to either of them.

Children have emotional, behavior, physical, social, and cognitive effects.

Emotional effects:
- Guilt, responsible for the abuse
- Confusion between what love and hate it is
- Anger about violence

Behavior effects:
- Acting out or withdrawing
- Filling adult roles (care-taking)
- Bullying
- Bedwetting
- Nightmares
Physical effects:
- Nervous, anxious
- Neglect personal hygiene
- Often sick with colds and flu

Social effects:
- Isolated
- Do not trust others easily
- Poor conflict resolution skills
- Very social because always wanting to stay away from home

Cognitive effects:
- Blames others for their own behaviors
- Okay to hit others and control others
- Low self-esteem

Law enforcement’s experiences on domestic violence calls
One of the most dangerous calls law enforcement assists with are domestic violence incidences. This is because law enforcement does not know their surroundings but the abuser/victim are very familiar with their surroundings because it is their home. Also, law enforcement does not know if there are knives or guns being hidden. Law enforcement has to make sure they are safe when assisting a domestic violence home. This is why some people feel law enforcement are cold, mean, rude, not caring or listening, etc.

Some of law enforcement’s comments to forming an updated training
- “Thank you very much for taking this on, it will be extremely beneficial if its training can get done.”
- “Definitely a needed class.”
- Wants ongoing training

Form for Evaluating Police Response to Domestic Violence
FORM FOR EVALUATING POLICE RESPONSE TO DOMESTIC VIOLENCE

By Marie De Santis, Women's Justice Center, March 17, 2003

Introduction

The form below is put together for use by domestic violence victims and their advocates. It’s designed to assist you in evaluating the police response and the police report on your domestic violence call. The form should help you identify problems in police response so that you can act quickly to get these problems corrected. You can also use this form to provide feedback to your police department and to your community on how well police are responding to domestic violence cases.

Law enforcement agencies, also, by using this form to survey domestic violence victims, can do internal quality control of their officers' handling of domestic violence calls. The police report is usually the most critical document a victim will have in determining whether or not she can escape domestic violence. If the police report is done properly, it will serve as a solid basis for prosecuting the perpetrator and getting the perpetrator under control. A good police report can also frequently resolve problems the victim may encounter in many other arenas, such as in family court, or in problems with landlords, school, employment, immigration, etc.

On the other hand, a bad police report - an incomplete or biased police report - can seriously undermine a victim's attempt to leave the relationship. A bad police report makes prosecution of the perpetrator very difficult or impossible. And a bad police report will often be used by the perpetrator against the victim. So it's always worth the effort for victims and their advocates to evaluate the police response and report as soon as possible, and then get corrections made. The evaluation form below doesn't cover all aspects of good police response to domestic violence. It's designed to touch on basic elements of good police response and to help you focus your own more thorough evaluation. So be sure and add your own thoughts in the space provided at the end of the form.

Please read the following notes before going through the form.

Notes:

- You don't have to answer any question(s) you don't want to answer, and, of course, you don't have to answer questions that don't pertain to your situation.
- If more than one officer responded to your call, you can choose to answer in regard to just one officer, or you can answer in regard to both, referring to them as officer #1 and officer #2.
- Feel free to put any comments, corrections, or explanations you may have in the spaces between the questions or in the space provided at the end of the form.

Appendix G:
Letter to Domestic Violence Related Agencies
To whom it may concern,

As part of my graduating project at California State University Monterey Bay, I have created an updated domestic violence training for Monterey County law enforcement. I have been an intern at YWCA Monterey County’s confidential shelter for women and children fleeing from domestic violence. I have found that domestic violence victims can feel re-victimized from Monterey County law enforcement. One way to assist with this issue was to understand what law enforcement does regarding domestic violence training. A survey was passed out to fifteen training managers in Monterey County. I received nine surveys back.

An interesting finding was that a department had not had any domestic violence training for over six years. Through the surveys, the training managers informed me about what they would want in their domestic violence training. The top six out of twelve answers were: resources, handouts, restraining orders, domestic violence in homosexual relationships, effects on children, victim’s rights.

Majority of the departments can only allow under thirty minutes for the training. I have formed the training to their expressed needs and have kept it condensed in consideration of time.

I have had great support from law enforcement during this research. I have been told that it is “definitely a needed class” and “ongoing training” is wanted. I was also told “Thank you very much for taking this on, it will be extremely beneficial if this training can get done.” This appreciation and gratitude is what helped me complete my capstone goal.

Attached is the formed domestic violence training for Monterey County law enforcement. I am sharing this training to fellow domestic violence organizations that serve Monterey County. I would like you to be informed on what law enforcement want to be trained on, and hopefully will be trained on. It is important that law enforcement and domestic violence agencies work together to be able to best assist domestic violence victims, survivors, perpetrators, and children.

If you have any questions, please contact me at brooke_ashley@csumb.edu or you may contact the Shelter Manager Ulda Valverde at uvalverde@ywcamc.org or by phone at (831) 373-6832.

I hope this has been of interest to you. Thank you for your time,

Brooke Ashley
